

Dear Members

Oak Processionary Moth

Unfortunately we have had to lock the middle gate on 40 Acres (across the back of the club) due to instruction from the Environmental Agency/Forestry Commission as we have an Oak Processionary Moth outbreak. This is particularly toxic for children and animals. If the nests are touched or poked, they cause a nasty rash and give off dust that can cause respiratory problems. A caterpillar that is stressed or threatened can eject its hairs, which act a little like harpoons, and can penetrate or irritate any exposed skin. Dogs are very susceptible as they will pick up the hairs on their paws and then lick them as they start to itch. This then leads to the hairs being transferred on to the animal's tongue and can result in itching, swelling, vomiting and even death.
